I. 次の英文を読み、問いに答えなさい。

The story 1)(about / you / to / are / read) could be called fantastic, horrifying, and funny. It is all of these things, but it is one thing more. It's true.

It was during May 1976 ( 2 ) a Japanese TV station invited Gerald Croiset, a Dutch parapsychologist, to come to Japan to help locate a missing 7 year-old-girl from Chiba Prefecture, ( 3 ) real name I feel obliged to keep private here to protect the innocent victim. Croiset was believed to have a paranormal mental ability called 'Clairvoyance', which is a French compound word ( 4 ) of 'clair', meaning 'clear' and 'voyance', an equivalent of the English word 'vision'. 5) A person gifted with this ability can supposedly gain information about an object, an individual or a location not through 6) the usual five senses that every human being is equipped with, but through extrasensory perception.

After( 7 ) over a couple of pictures of the missing girl and a map of the area where she had presumably gone missing, Croiset implied as a possibility that she might already be dead, 8) and added that he could visualize her 'floating on the surface of a lake in the vicinity of a quay for boats and a yellow protruding structure'. The TV crew immediately rushed to the site which Croiset pointed out on the map.

I could hardly believe 9) what happened next! It turned out that the girl was found exactly as he predicted, in the reservoir near a quay for rowing boats and a water supply tower, which was painted yellow. I was glued to the TV set, completely dumbfounded at the unpredictable unfolding of events that was actually taking place right in front of my eyes.

Wow! What Croiset accomplished was the real deal!

How long will it take before we feel ready to face up squarely to the unknown, without fear but with the hope of making a difference for all of humankind?
